HAND-CRAFTED

Headquartered in Denmark, Duckfeet footwear have been handcrafted in Europe without the use of synthetic materials for over 40 years. Duckfeet are simple, functional, and representative of mid-20th century Danish design. A wide footbed offers ample room for toes to move, and air to reach the feet. Vegetable-tanned leather midsoles and uppers give feet space to breathe.

SUSTAINABLE

Though we all need something to wear on our feet, boots, shoes, and sandals don't simply fall out of the sky. They do impart an impact on the environment we all share. Duckfeet USA strives to lead a sustainable existence by using carbon-neutral delivery through Cloverly, partnering with the Plant a Tree organization and using sustainably sourced leather from Terracare®.

SLOW FASHION

We encourage our customers to consider their purchase thoughtfully and invest in quality products. One way we help break the cycle is by using crepe outsoles. Resoling your pair can increase the life of your shoes significantly—we've even seen customers who have had their Duckfeet going on 20 years! Duckfeet are also known for their gender-neutral design that appeals to many walks of life. This is what keeps Duckfeet out of the trend cycle and on your feet.

DIANNELY ANTIGUA

Tucked away in Diannely Antigua’s podcast room, a framed quote by Rainer Maria Rilke sits on the wall: “Let everything happen to you, beauty and terror, just keep going, no feeling is final”—a quote that perfectly encapsulates who she is.

Diannely Antigua is a woman of many talents. In addition to being a published author, podcaster and Duckfeet enthusiast, she is also the current Poet Laureate of Portsmouth, NH—the youngest and first woman of color to hold the title.

Descended from Dominican roots, Diannely was born and raised in Haverhill, Massachusetts. She characterizes herself as a true Virgo, obsessed with cleanliness and organization. Growing up, she was immersed in books and started journaling at age nine. “My mother was a children’s librarian, and I was often surrounded by language, by words. It was almost impossible to not come out as a writer after having that upbringing. I owe a lot to language and a lot to words.”

She even considers poetry to have saved her in many ways. Dealing with a traumatic childhood and grappling with mental illness, poetry was a way to break free and come into her own. “I consider poetry to be my religion, and I really do think poetry has the power to heal. I think it depends on how we use it. Many things can be healing tools, and poetry was that for me.”

Her award-winning 2019 poetry collection Ugly Music is described as “a cacophonous symphony of reality, dream, trauma, and obsession.” The collection is heavily biographical, beautiful, and raw. She shares a passage from where the title was taken: “Diary entry #1: Revisitation: You’ll go to the mountain count to ten, you’ll fall on the world like an ugly music.”

On the subject of Duckfeet, she is very fond of Blåvand. “[Duckfeet] are quirky and cute. They fit right into my style, especially the Blåvand. They’re very comfortable and really go with everything. My relationship to clothing, fashion and art, they are all very much the same, and they connect to who I am as a person. If I can feel comfortable in what I’m wearing, I can feel comfortable in who I am. If I feel like I can express myself fully, I feel like I can conquer the world.”

Diannely has also recently modeled for our summer photoshoot (pictured left). Having struggled with chronic pain for a large part of her life, seeing herself in those images reminded her that her body was “worthy of a picture, not just a vessel for pain but for beauty and life.”

We’re grateful Duckfeet have made her feel confident walking into the future.
